

SOUTHERN ATHLETES STARS IN THE NORTH.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA athletes have made enviable records at the northern universities this year. In football, track, baseball, and rowing, the South has contributed men who have had leading parts in the victories won in the big intercollegiate contests.

The 1907-1908 athletic year closes with the honors clearly in favor of the University of California. Stanford carried off the palm on the football field, but the Berkeley track team, baseball nine, varsity crew, and tennis team took the Cardinal aggregations into camp, leaving to Stanford victories in the freshman track and freshman rowing contests.

Tuller of Pomona was captain of the University of California football fifteen, and although his men went down to defeat in the intercollegiate match, the big captain played a great game at forward and proved an excellent leader. Mow Mitchell and Cadwalader of Los Angeles were on the victorious Cardinal team, playing five-eighths and fullback, respectively. Both men distinguished themselves in the big game and in the contests with Vancouver, Owen of Pasadena, Reynolds and Hainley of Los Angeles, and Cook of Santa Barbara, were substitutes on the Stanford team.

In track athletics, the representatives of the South made remarkable performances. Capt. Forrest Stanton of Los Angeles led the University of California team to victory in the big meet. He established a new Stanford-Berkeley record in the 440-yard dash, covering the distance in 59 2-5 seconds. He annexed the century event in 59 1-5 seconds, and took third in the 220-yard dash.

Second only to Stanton was Brown of Stanford, formerly a student at Pomona College and hailing from Los Angeles. He established a new record of 1 minute 59 2-5 seconds for the half-mile run, and ran second to Stanton in the 440-yard dash. He then ran a lap in the relay race, helping the Cardinal to win this event.

Cowles of Santa Barbara proved the best all-around hurdler in the North, taking the high hurdles for Berkeley in the fast time of 15 4-5 seconds, and running second to his teammate, Johns, in the 220-yard hurdles.

Paul of Hollywood won the 220-yard dash for Berkeley in the intercollegiate contest, finishing in 22 4-5 seconds. Forrest Stanton ran third. Grundy of Long Beach ran well in this event early in the season, but failed to place against Stanford.

Wyman of Santa Barbara was one of the best quarter-milers at Stanford. He finished third to Stanton and Brown in the 440-yard dash, all the place winners being southern men.

In the high hurdles, Edwards of Santa Barbara ran second to Cowles. Both men received their early training at the Santa Barbara High School.

The two-mile race in the intercollegiate meet brought together W. W. Adams of Riverside, who represented Stanford, and Clabaugh of Anaheim, wearing the blue and gold. Adams ran second to Gaines of Berkeley, but Clabaugh, contrary to the dope sheet, collapsed on the last lap and did not finish.

Luther Severy, a graduate of Pasadena High School, and this year a senior at Stanford, has had the hardest luck of any Stanford athlete from Southern California. He went to Stanford with an academic record for the 580-yard run, and ever since entering the university has tried to make his "B." The intercollegiate meet this year gave him his last chance, but on account of a sprained ankle sustained while playing football, he was unable to win a place.

Two southern men rowed in the Berkeley varsity crew that triumphed over Stanford. Schroeder and Hall, both of Los Angeles, pulled No. 1 and No. 2 oars, respectively, and were considered among the strongest men in the boat. Four southern men sat in the losing Cardinal shell. C. H. Weendries of Los Angeles, who rowed No. 6, was considered the strongest man in the crew. C. H. Benson of Redlands rowed No. 2, C. H. Vase of Los Angeles pulled No. 1, and R. H. Reynolds of Pasadena occupied the bow seat.

The winning Stanford freshman crew contained five men from the south. K. Chamberlin of Los Angeles pulled the stroke oar, and J. A. Viall of Santa Ana, J. A. Killian of Los Angeles, K. Dale of Riverside, and J. H. Lewis, occupied No. 2, No. 3, No. 4 and bow, respectively.

For the first time in two years Stanford went down to defeat in the intercollegiate baseball series, winning only one of the three games. Earnest of Long Beach and Lewis of Anaheim had regular places on the winning team. Vernon Alford of Ventura was manager. Mow Mitchell of Los Angeles held down the catcher's position for Stanford, and Tallant of Santa Barbara played left field.

The records made by the athletes in the local colleges, and the admirable feats of southern men in the northern universities, place Southern California in the front ranks as a breeding spot for athletes. Probably no other section of the country has produced as many high-class out-of-door athletes in the past two years as has the territory south of the Tehachepi.

RICHARDSON IS CAPTAIN.

Wins Over Burek to Head U.S.C. Team on Track—Plans for Cinder Improvements.

Charlie Richardson of Santa Paula, U.S.C.'s great all-round athlete, has been elected to captain the 1908 track team. Charlie received ten votes to six tallies for Stan Burek.

Richardson has made an enviable record in both prep and college athletics, and is conceded to be the most versatile man in Southern California. His performances for the past year are: Hammer throw, 140ft. 7in.; shot put, 49ft. 2in.; high jump, 5ft. 8 1/2in.; pole vault, 11ft. 4in.; broad jump, 21ft.

Richardson did not reach his true form this past season, being handicapped by a bruised foot and a severe cold. The coming year will be his third season on the university team, and the local track enthusiasts are looking forward to even greater achievements from the big Santa Paula.

Charlie is already planning ahead for next year, and as an earnest of his intentions will ask the athletic board to complete the preparation of the cinder path, which was merely a bed of clinkers this season, precluding the possibility of record performances.
