

ATHLETES ARE REAL PATRIOTS.

Hundreds of Our Celebrities Hear Call of Colors.

Value of Sports is Proven by War's Demands.

Work on Track and Gridiron not Retarded.

When the call went out for defenders of democracy, for men who were willing to hurl themselves into the jaws of death for the flag of their country, Southern California athletes were among the first to respond...

No better brief for the value of athletics could be presented than the one brought forth by the experience of the great war. The athletes of that year, the men who "took the seas" at high school or college during their school days, have proven the most apt pupils in the mastering of military tactics and the handling of arms.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the situation is the unanticipated maintenance of athletics at Southern California high schools or colleges have discontinued a team in any branch of sport despite the constraints of a lean budget...

The Times has undertaken to compile an honor roll of Southern California athletes now serving their country, general schools have not completed their official lists...
