NEW YORK, N. Y., June 30.—

Henry Norwood Ewell, the Barney of the cinder path, at 27, became the oldest sprinter in the modern history of track and field athletics to win a national century title; Elmore Harris, the one-time Morgan State College hurdler and quarter-miler, successfully converted himself into a dash man; powerful Hank Dreyer took both the hammer and 56-pound throw and was crowned; and Roland Sink, slender former University of California freshman, now a Navy Midshipman at Harvard University, took his place among the world's best milers at Randall's Island today.

Ewell, former Penn State College great who is now an Army private at Camp Kilmer, tied the meet record at 10.3 seconds and fell only a tenth of a second short of peerless Jesse Owens' world record in winning the 100-meter title at the Triborough Bridge Stadium as the 57th annual National A. A. U. championships came to a close in an atmosphere of throbbing excitement, pulsating drama and intense heat.

FOUR CHAMPIONS BEATEN

Four defending champions fell by the wayside—Earl Audet, beaten by melodious Wilfred Bangert in the shot-put; Don Barksdale, second to Villanova's Marine Trainee Burt Cox in the hop-step-and-jump; Frank Berst, his aspirations in the 56-pound weight throw burst by Dreyer and Case Institute's Bill Lund, who went unplaced in the broad jump—while only three repeated.

Dreyer of course, retained his ball-and-chain championship while adding the 56-pound weight, and in addition, Dr. Arky Erwin remained on the 400-meter hurdles throne while the University of Illinois' Bob Kelley was repeating at 200 meters.

retained its senior team title with 74 points, 26 more than the second-place New York State A. C. Illinois was the only 27, the New Orleans A. C. fourth, 26, the Grand Street B. C. fifth with 25.

MINNESOTA DOUBLE

Yet despite the prominence of veterans like Ewell, Harris, Dreyer, et al, the newer generation shared in the unexpectedly good performances produced by this, the A. A. U.'s fourth war-time scramble. Three of Friday's junior winners moved up to the 100-meter dash, including the hop-step-and-jump. Rice Institute's John R. Donaldson accomplished in the discus throw and Los Angeles' Ron Fraser in the 200-meter low hurdles.

Ewell, 3, 4, 4-1/2, 100, 220 and broad jump champion at Penn State in both 1941 and '42, climaxed a stringing campaign—one that saw him win the Inquirer invitation 60 during the winter, the Penn Relay century during the spring—by rocketing out of his starting crouch at the other hurdle, the authorities changed the time to 0:13, the equal of the A. A. U. meet record, set by California's Harold Davis in '43, duplicated by Ewell himself in '41, and by Davis again in '41.

NEAR WORLD MARK

The time is the same as the Olympic record set by Michigan's Eddie Tolan at Los Angeles in 1932, but a tenth of the world criterion shared by Davis and Owens. Barney, a Lancaster High School sensation before matriculating at Penn State, might not have had four yards to spare in the century final won by Harris. The Shore A. C. speedster, who won the 400-meter flat and 200-meter hurdles races in '41, qualified for the 100-meter final yesterday, but scratched out.

GUIDA IS THIRD

The latter won all right, edging ahead about 25 yards from the start and besting the time to 0:21.30, but he had to work hard. Navy athletic specialist George Guida, Villanova's 1943 National Junior champion, was right on Harris' heels until the last 40 yards, then weakening he was outdistanced by Missouri's Big Six champion, Bob Crosson, and the latter was only two yards behind at the finish. Guida took third, noting out the Southeastern Conference king, Louisiana State's Tom Decker. Before the governor of the field, Jimmie Rafferty, who went through the winter undefeated, the 1500-meter run shared top billing with the sprints, but the New York A. C.'s six rivals proved so respectful of person. Rafferty, controlling the race at the start, was out and set a first-quarter pace of 65 seconds, a half-mile speed of 2:11. But then the others began moving, and Rafferty, who passed up defense of his 5000-meter title to concentrate on the metric mile, went up sixth.

SIMMS BOARS AHEAD

First to pass him was beach Boy Simms, the I. C. 4-A inviter. Invitation mile winner from the Pioneer Club by way of New York University, Simms stepped out on the backstretch of the third lap, eating up ground with a long, steady stride. Bill Sink was still to be had from him. He took command on the straightaway, whistling by the three-quarter mile mark in 3:11 and breathing easily. Balmbridge Naval Training Station Tom Quinn, running for the New York A. C., yapped at his heels around the curve, but Sink cut loose on the backstretch to beat off the challenge.

QUINN FALTERS

The Harvard Supply Corps Middle was relentless, kept pouncing it on with a 30-second final quarter and Quinn ultimately was forced to concede by relaxing on the stretch. Sink won in 3:34.4, an equivalent of 4:14 2/3 mile, with a margin of about 12 yards which, in the light of what had gone before, was fairly close.

for that matter. In the day's longest race—3 miles, 188 yards, 2 inches—Cornell University's freshman I. C. 4-A and Penn relay carnival (two-mile) runner, John F. Kennerly, pulled out in front at the start and stayed there gradually increasing his margin until at the finish he had 200 yards on the runner club's 1944 junior king-pin, Henry Walsh. Kennerly, a Cornell star, set a new yesterday's junior test, wound up fifth in this race, won in 14 minutes 10.4 seconds.

For sheer pulsating drama the 400-meter event was unsurpassed. Herbert McKenley, the 1943 Boston College runner from the British West Indies, forged ahead at 150 yards, but at the turn the veteran Jimmy Herbert, the Grand Street B. C. former indoor 600-yard champion, swung out of the pack and ran in McKenley's shadow.

McKENLEY STUMBLES

To the spectators, even the shrilling of McKenley's withering heat, running in someone's shadow looked like smart strategy. It looked even smarter when Herbert pulled even on the backstretch, and over the last 50 yards the two leaders ran in a tight harness, keeping step with each other's heels. With only about five yards left, McKenley stumbled slightly and to the stands it looked as though Herbert's lunge had carried him across.

But the judges decided otherwise and Herbert's lunge was ruled to be the closing of cheer that greeted the final announcement of McKenley's victory. Clockers caught the rangy West Indian, a reformed dash man, in 0:58.4.

KELLEY MAKES BID

In retaining his 800-meter crown, Kelley reversed McKenley's 400 strategy. Where McKenley went out in the start and set the pace, the Illinois' Big Ten long-legs remained in the background until hitting the final turn. David W. Smith, a New York A. C. representative, steamed along in front until Kelley decided his time had come.

The Power A. C.'s ace, Stanton Callender, one of New York University's running twins, realized all along that Kelley was the man to beat. Saving himself some brain-work, Callender simply stayed on Kelley's heels and when the motor moved, he moved with him. As they pounded around that final curve the runners were still well bunched and the New York A. C.'s Al Daily, an inter-collegiate king while a student at Manhattan college, found himself in an inextricable situation.

DAILY BEATS OUT

He was bent so tightly he couldn't get out. When he tried, he was nudged into the white concrete curbing and went tumbling into the infield out of the race.

Kelley, meantime, had collapsed. Barely carrying Callender, two past the early pace-maker on the stretch, but Callender did not have enough left to close in any farther and Kelley finished out with a 12-yard gap of sunlight in 1:54.1.

Ronald Fraser, of the Los Angeles County Boys' Club, was another junior champion who moved up. Winner of the novice crown Friday, Fraser inched ahead at the third barrier and finished out the 200-meter low hurdles with three yards to spare on Quamby Katmar, of Baldwin-Wallace, in 24 seconds.

ERWIN EASY VICTOR

The junior high hurdles champion did not fare so well, however, for August Erforth, San Antonio (Tex.) schoolboy, never could catch Kelly Morgan, offered the initial of the Orleans standard-bearer, and glided over the third barrier. Morgan won the 110-meter test in 0:14.9. Erwin recent recipient of a medical decree and a Navy lieutenant's commission, ran third in the high hurdles, but in the pulsating 400-meter barrier he was in his element. From the very outset he set the pace and at the tape was a good five yards in front of the junior winner, Private Hubert Gath, who was representing Washington.

BANGERT'S DUAL ROLE

It was immediately before the first heat of the high hurdles that Bangert quickly disintegrated them. He demonstrated his vocal prowess. He had just led the qualifying trials of the 16-pound iron ball event, with a chuck of 31 ft. 3 ins. when his big blond body glistering from the heat, he was called by the microphone. With no musical accompaniment he sang the Star Spangled Banner in such a rich baritone that spectators momentarily wondered whether he might be better at singing than at sports. But Bangert quickly disintegrated them. In the second round of the regular contest he got off a heave of 37-10, and it was fortunate for him that he did so. Earl Audet, the black-haired husky who went to Southern California by way of Georgetown University, uncorked an effort of 31-7, which excelled Bangert's best preliminary performance.

MOROCOM ACTIVE

Anyway, Missouri made a top showing in the shot, for in third place came Edward G. Quirk, the freshman who won in the Penn Relays. No fewer than five strong men bettered 50 feet and Bangert came back later in the day to open the plate 148-2 to place second in the discus, won by Rice Institute's Southeastern Conference king, John R. Donaldson, with an achievement of 151-2. The day reversed the results of the N. C. A. meet, where Bangert won the discus and finished second in the shot.

However, drama in the field events was by no means confined to the shot and discus. Lieutenant Albert E. Bock, Missouri, the former triple I. C. 4-A champion from the University of New Hampshire, was his usual bay self, though in competition for the first time in two years. New in the Army paratroops at Fort Benning, Ga., Missouri competed in four events all told, three of them simultaneously.

TIE IN HIGH JUMP

He was keeping rapid all afternoon from pole vault runway to broad jump pit, to high jump standards and, finally, to the hop-step-and-jump carpet. Only in the pole vault, where he tied at 13-6 with the University of Illinois Bob Phelps, was Missouri at the top, but he staggered for fifth in the high jump at 6-2 1/2.

Just as there was a tie for fifth, so there was a deadlock for first in the high jump. There was an oddity here, too. Three times since 1933 Corporal Josh Williamson, the former Ocean City High School bamboo-cleaver, had tied for first in the indoor championships. Yesterday he was one of four who yearned 6-3 1/2 to tie for the outdoor title. The others were former champion Dave Albritton, ex-Olio State star; Dick Sehnack, Massena (N. Y.) A. A. youth, who'd gone only 6-4 1/2 in taking second Friday in the jumpers, and Lester Howe, Columbia Middletown.

Surprising in the broad jump was the fact that Sylvester Bell, of the Los Angeles County B. C., could catapult himself no farther than 21-

ft. In winning the junior title he had leaped 24-10, but today a clearance of 24 feet 1/2, by Pittsburgh's Allegheny Mountain king, Herb Douglas, was good enough to win. It might not have been enough, though, if Coast Guardman Elmer Peacock, the erstwhile Temple frat, had not offered a mild recurrence of the pulled tendon he first suffered while broad-jumping in Milan, Italy, back in 1935.

ALL OUT IN PRELIMINARY

Apparently Peacock had invited disaster by going all out in the 100-meter preliminaries. He ran a close second to San Antonio's Samuels in the heat, but for all his efforts wound up a fifth fourth in the semi as a number of other stand-outs—including Bill Mathis, Washington (D. C.) Cardozo High's intercollegiate champion and Zane Moon, whose Kemmerer (Wyo.) neighbors had raised funds to send him East—also faded out of the picture. Nevertheless, Peacock persisted in the broad-jump and in leaping 23-11 1/2, he hurt his thigh again. Even so, his performance stood up for second place.

Likewise, in Dreyer's two events, there was drama. By heaving 25 ft. 2 ins., the former Rhode Island State strong-man dethroned New York A. C. team-mate Frank Burt by 4 1/2 ins., and in retaining his hammer-throwing crown with a whiff of 166-11, Dreyer beat out Navy Lieutenant Gant, W. Miller, ex-University of West Virginia athlete, who has won two successive Penn Relay championships.

FAVORITE IS FOURTH

The popular favorite in the hammer throw, however, was another former Penn carnival winner, Lieutenant Colonel Chester G. Cruikshank, who placed fourth with a throw of 137-8 1/2.

Cruikshank has done better on more than one occasion, but none of his meritorious achievements of the past could match his fourth place of today; no, not even his throw of 174-1, which won in 1939 or his spin of 173-4, which triumphed in '42. For today's competition was Cruikshank's first in competition since his return from the European Theater of Operations.

COMPETED OVERSEAS

Overseas he won both the Silver and Bronze stars for gallantry in action, and thrice was wounded—in both arms, one leg. Yet from abroad Cruikshank wrote A. A. U. Secretary Dan Ferris that he'd like to compete, apologizing that he knew his request was somewhat irregular, because he did not possess an entry blank. Ferris wrote back, advising him not to worry about the details.

In neither glimmer nor significance—indeed, not in any respect—could the fourth-place medal Cruikshank won today compare with the Distinguished Service Cross he won in the landings at Sicily, Salerno, Anzio and Normandy. But the colorless found in a change, was happy to be back at his old game, collecting medals in sport rather than war.
